Catholic University of America's Sale of 'Dorothy Dress' Blocked

By CAROL ZIMMERMANN

There is no telling when the iconic blue and white gingham dress worn by Judy Garland as Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz" will find a "place like home."

A federal judge May 23 prevented The Catholic University of America from selling the iconic costume from the 1939 movie the day before it was scheduled to be auctioned. The preliminary injunction is in place until the costume's rightful ownership can be determined, a process that could take months or even years.

Judge Paul Gardephe of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York said a lawsuit over the ownership question had enough merit to proceed and that the dress could not be sold while the case is pending in federal court in Manhattan.

A presale estimate of the monetary value of the dress listed it at $800,000 to $1.2 million according to the international auction house running the "Bonhams Classic Hollywood: Film and Television" sale in Los Angeles.

In April, Catholic University announced its plans to auction the dress and use the funds to develop a new film acting program at the university and endow a faculty chair.

Weeks later, Barbara Ann Hartke, the niece of Dominican Father Gilbert Hartke—the legendary founder and head of the university's drama department—filed suit saying the costume was part of her uncle's estate and not the school's property.

Father Hartke was given the dress in 1973 by actress Mercedes McCambridge, who was an artist-in-residence at the university that year. After his death in 1986, no one knew the whereabouts of the costume until it turned up last year amid renovations.

The family member's lawsuit claims the university "has no ownership interest in the dress as...there is no documentation demonstrating decedent ever formally or informally donated the dress to Catholic University."

Catholic University attorneys said in their own filing against the lawsuit that the dress could not be considered part of the priest's estate because he had taken priestly vows "to never accept gifts in his personal capacity."
